Dream and reality

Fantastic: Neuschwanstein Castle, Germany's most famous historic building, is the fairy-tale king's medieval Castle of the Grail; right beside it is Hohenschwangau Palace, where King Ludwig II once spent a happy childhood.

Ludwig's father King Maximilian II had Hohenschwangau Palace built as a summer residence by the idyllic Lake Alpsee. Ludwig spent a happy childhood and youth here. The palace is well worth a visit: with its richly decorated rooms and original furniture, it vividly recalls the everyday life of the royal family.

The legend lives on: King Ludwig II (1845–1886), who met his death under mysterious circumstances in Lake Starnberg, is a fascinating figure. Every year millions of visitors flock to the palaces of this shy monarch who loved art and loathed state affairs.

The summer residence of the Bavarian kings: Schloss Hohenschwangau.

A romantic setting between mountains,

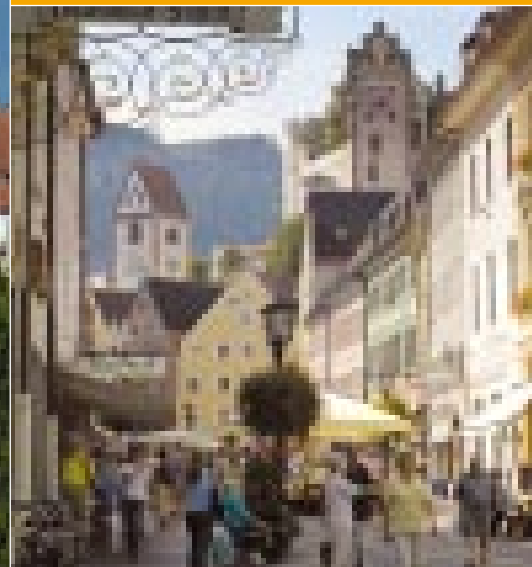

In Füssen, Bavarian traditions are still very much a part of people's day-to-day lives. Guests from all over the world can experience these customs entirely authentically – for example at an alphorn concert by Lake Hopfensee. The fascinating mountain panorama, the glittering lake and sonorous alphorns – that's pure Bavaria.

Tourist Information

Castle Neuschwanstein

④ ⑤ St Mang Monastery and Basilica. The former Benedictine monastery dates back to the 9th century. It was given its present baroque style by Füssen architect Johann Jakob Herkomer. Today the historical rooms house the municipal authorities and the Füssen Heritage Museum. For 50 years summer chamber music and jazz concerts have been held in the magnificent Prince's Hall. The former monastery church and present-day parish church is the largest and most impressive of Füssen's baroque churches. The crypt is thought to date back in its architectural history to the times of St Magnus and houses Bavaria's oldest fresco.

Füssen provides you with a mobile phone tour consisting of 12 stations. Discover Füssen's history and explore its tales of the past.

① The Reichenstraße, historical patricians' houses, huddling side by side, line the main shopping street in the pedestrian precinct, which is identical to the route of the earlier Roman road Via Claudia Augusta.

Illusionist paintings on the façades of the High Palace

③ The High Palace (Hohes Schloss). The former residence of the Augsburg prince bishops, with unique illusionist paintings on the façades of the courtyard, is one of the most important late gothic castle complexes in Germany. It now houses the Town Gallery of Paintings and a branch of the Bavarian State Collections of Paintings, where late Gothic and Renaissance works of art are on display.

The medieval town centre

⑤ The Füssen Heritage Museum. Archaeological finds and art treasures have provided evidence of 1000 years of monastery history. The splendid baroque rooms, which include the Prince's Hall, give some idea of the former monastery's wealth. The museum also boasts one of the finest collections of historical lutes and violins in Europe. In the Anna Chapel, which can be reached via the museum, is the impressive Death Dance cycle by Jakob Hiebeler (1602), the oldest of its kind in Bavaria.

⑩ The area of the present-day Bread Market is thought to have been the origin of the medieval town. Today it is here that the Lute-Makers Fountain recalls the historical importance of Füssen as the "Cradle of Lute-Making" in Europe.

⑪ In the enchanting lane called Brunnengasse is the house where the famous baroque sculptor Anton Sturm once lived.

⑫ The Schrankenplatz once served as the town's corn market. The late gothic Corn House is nowadays a popular meeting point. Opposite stands the former administration office.

⑥ Holy Ghost Hospital-Church. The richly decorated rococo façade of the Holy Ghost Hospital Church depicts St Florian as a help in preventing fires (the previous gothic church was burnt down in 1753) and St Christopher, who as the patron saint of raftsmen has his appropriate place here on the mighty River Lech.

⑦ The path along the banks of the River Lech runs upstream to the district of Bad Faulenbach and downstream to Lake Forggensee. During a walk you repeatedly catch sight of fine views of the river, which up into the 19th century was an important traffic and trading route navigated by rafts.

The clock tower of the High Palace

FÜSSEN
im Allgäu

The restaurants and inns of Füssen offer true Allgäu-style hospitality. Bavarian specialities have a long tradition here and are delicious. These two pages show some examples of typical Bavarian dishes. Please note that they may be prepared slightly differently in the various restaurants.

Boiled white sausages (Weißwürste)

① are served with sweet mustard (süßer Senf) ② and a pretzel (Brezel) ③, a typical Bavarian bread speciality.

Meat loaf (Leberkäse/Fleischkäse) ④ is the favourite dish of many Bavarians. It tastes great with a tangy light or dark wheat beer (Weizenbier) ⑤.

A Bavarian snack platter (bayerische Brotzeitplatte) ⑥ includes ham, various kinds of sausage, spicy Allgäu cheese and bread. This also goes well with a wheat beer (Weizenbier) ⑤.

Fried pork sausage with sauerkraut (Schweinsbratwürste mit Sauerkraut) ⑦. These sausages are frequently eaten in a roll as a snack, too.

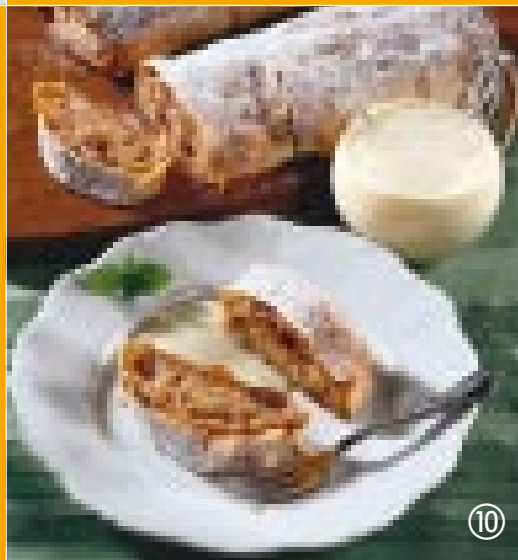

Knuckle of pork (Schweinshaxen) ⑧ is grilled or roasted and usually served with bread dumpling or potato dumpling and red cabbage or sauerkraut. A good hearty Bavarian speciality.

⑨

Apple Strudel (Apfelstrudel) ⑩, Apples wrapped in sweet strudel pastry with custard or vanilla ice cream and/or whipped cream.

⑩

Cheese spaetzle (Käsespätzle) ⑨ are an Allgäu speciality consisting of noodles mixed with spicy Allgäu cheese and sprinkled with fried onion rings.

Winter wonderland

Neuschwanstein Castle rises majestically against the snow-covered Alpine peaks. A visit to the castle is especially enjoyable in winter since one is able to view the royal chambers without the summer onrush of visitors.

Twinkling lights, Allgäu arts and crafts, the delicious fragrance of roast apples and punch: Füssen Christmas Market is held on two weekends in December in the festively illuminated monastery courtyard of St. Mang, at the heart of Füssen's historical town centre.

Winter time in Füssen: magnificently fresh winter air and a crystal-clear view of the snow-covered mountains. After a winter walk or a stroll through the historical town centre, how about taking a coffee or mulled wine in one of the cosy restaurants and cafés?
